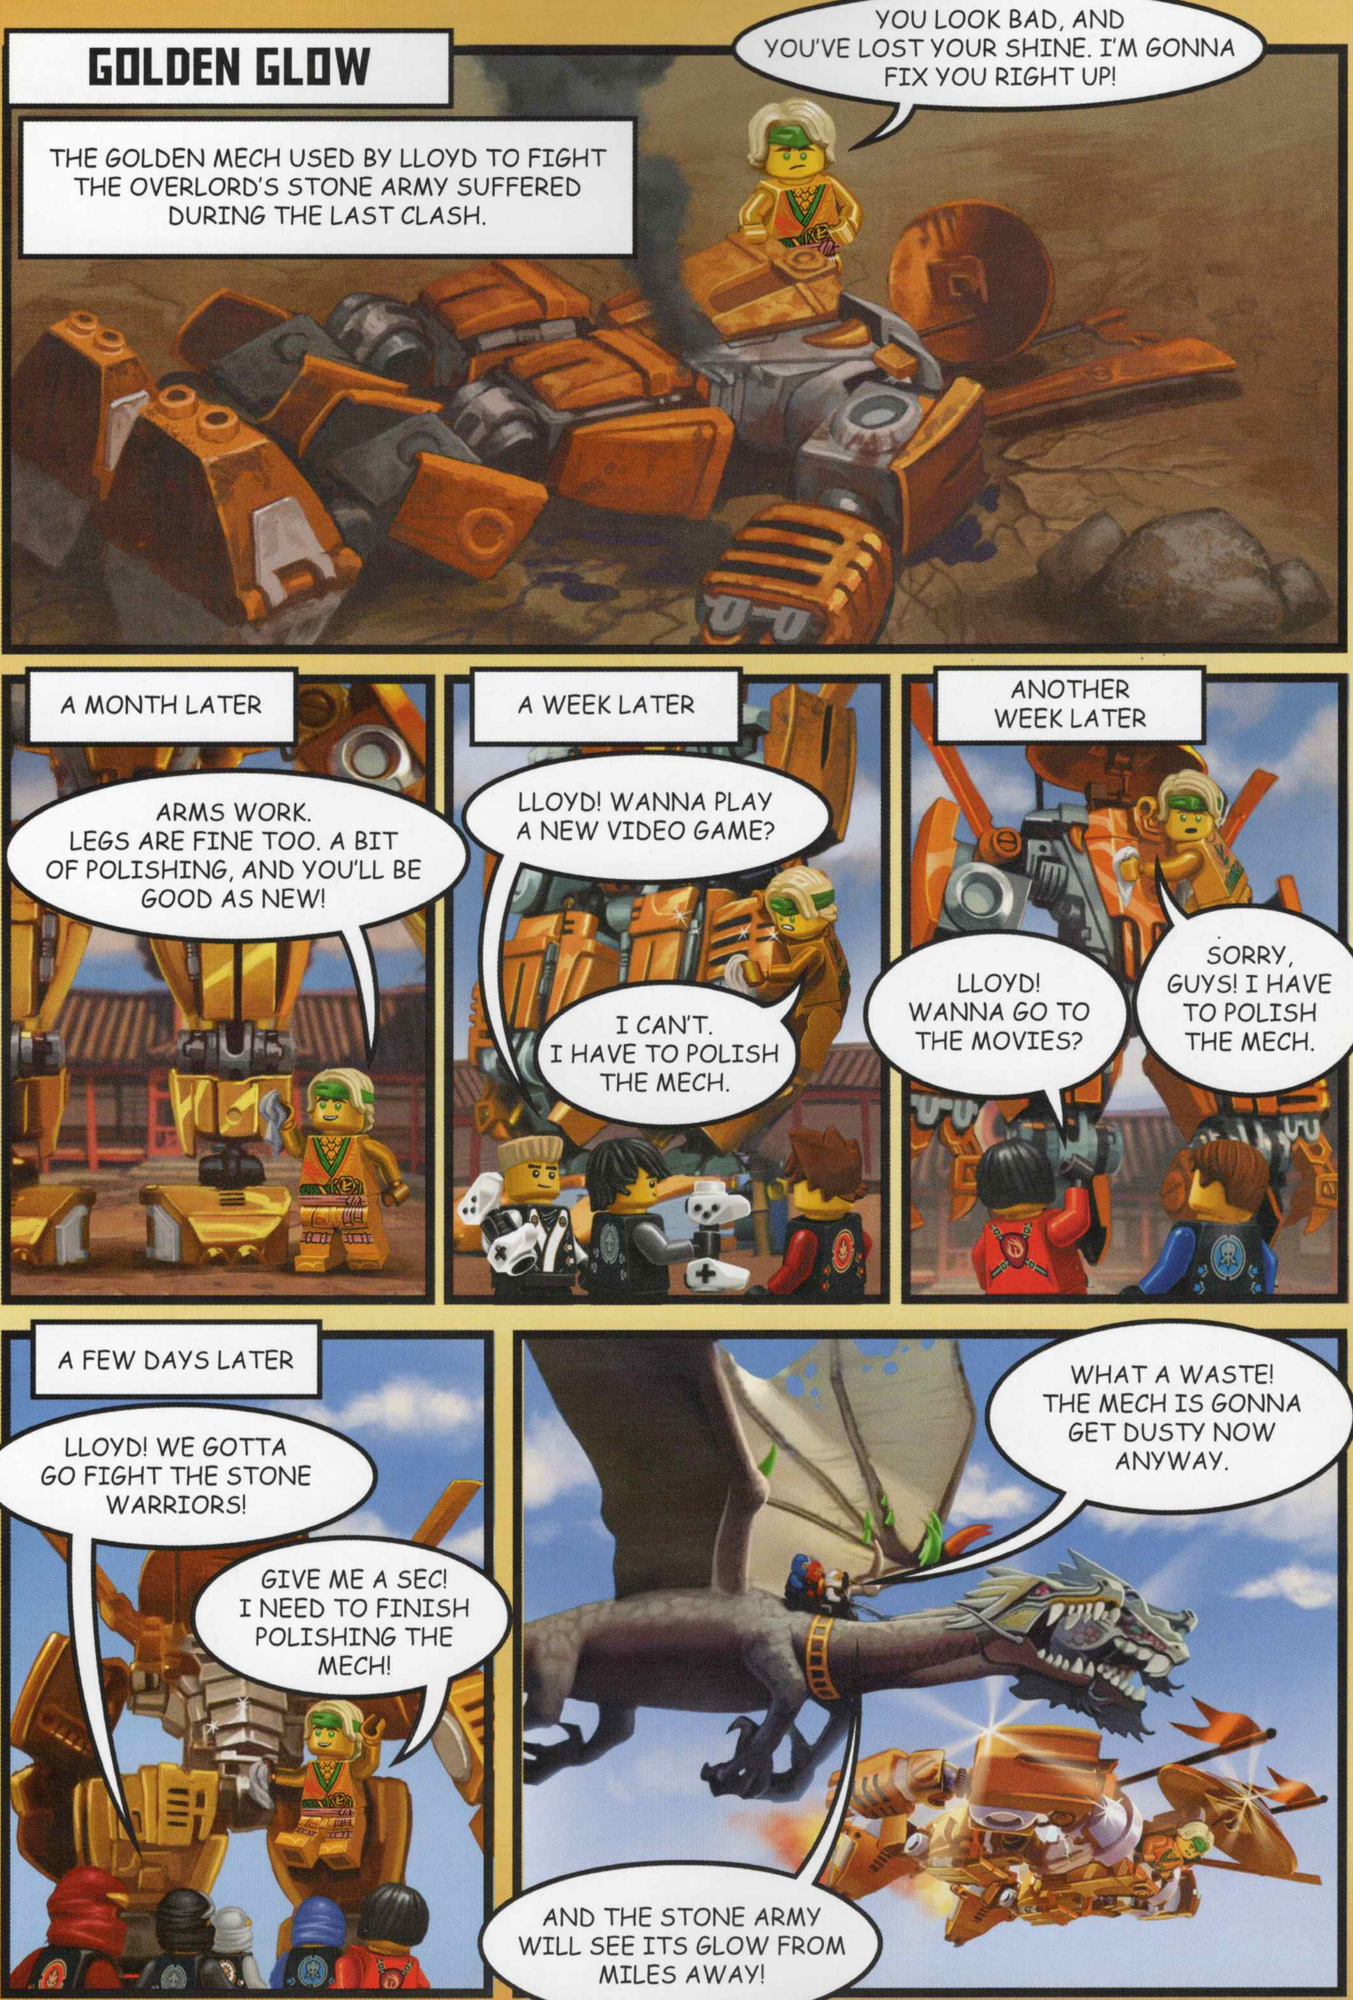
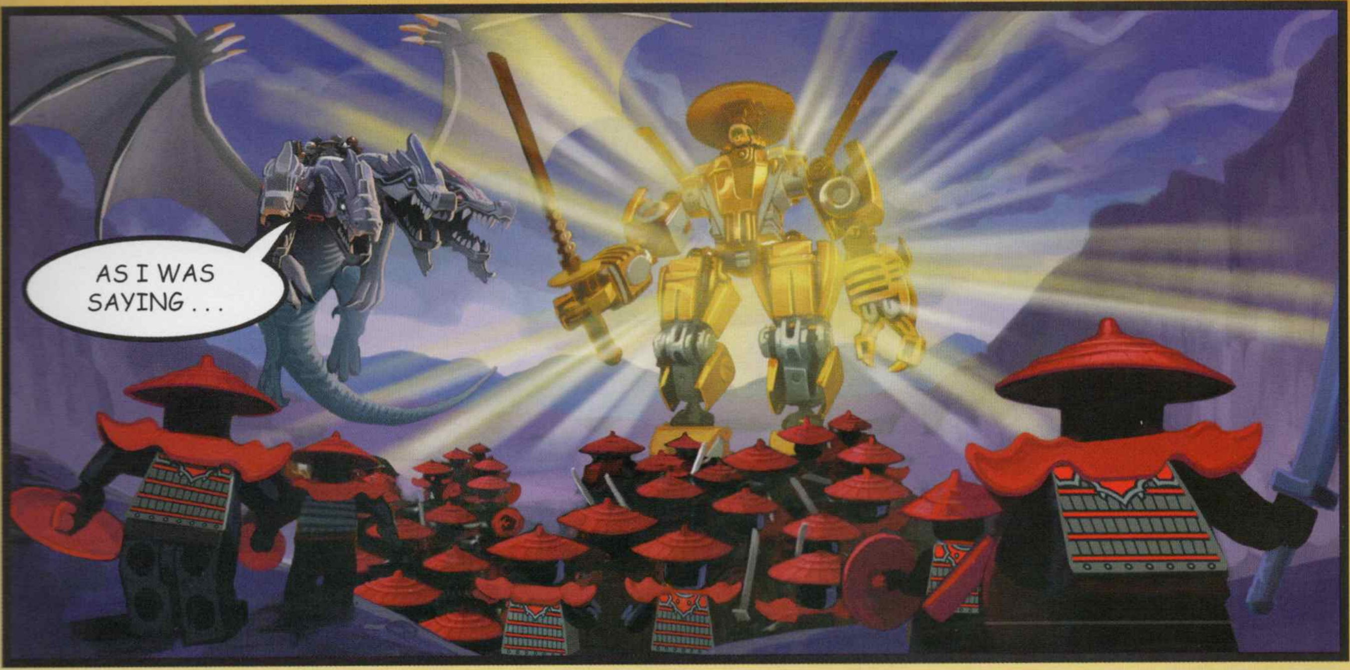
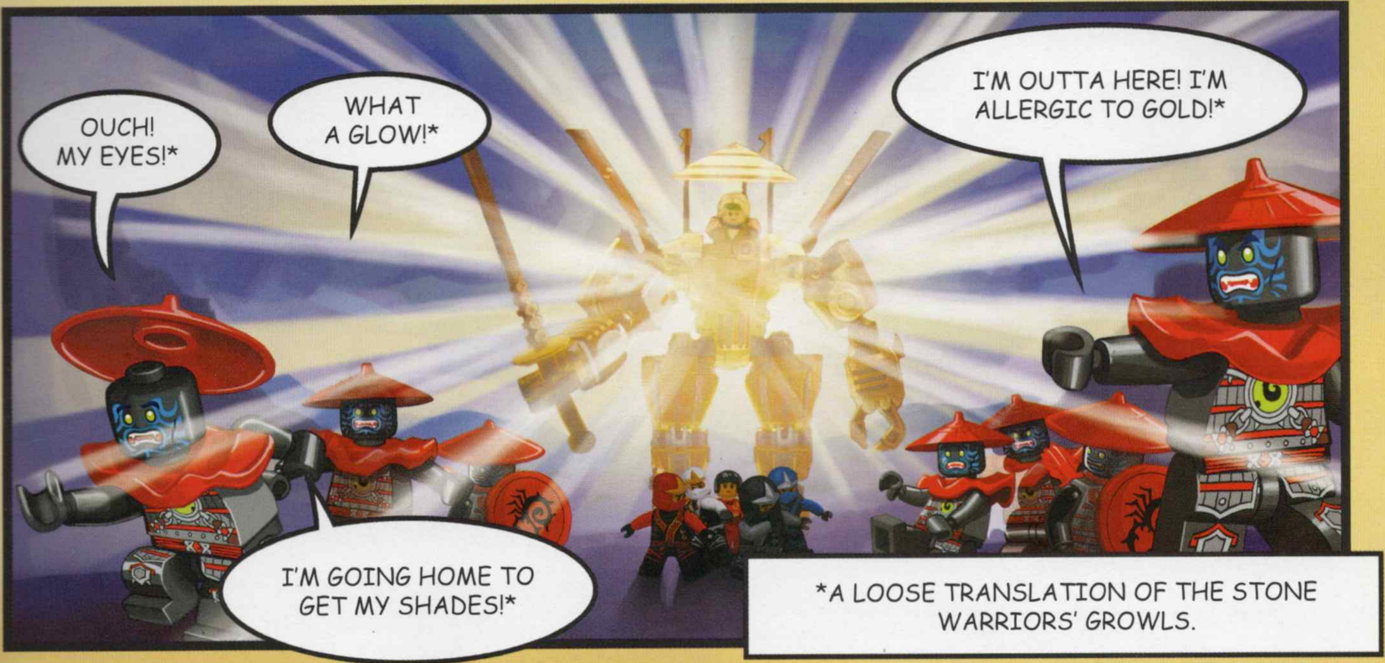
GOLDEN GLOW



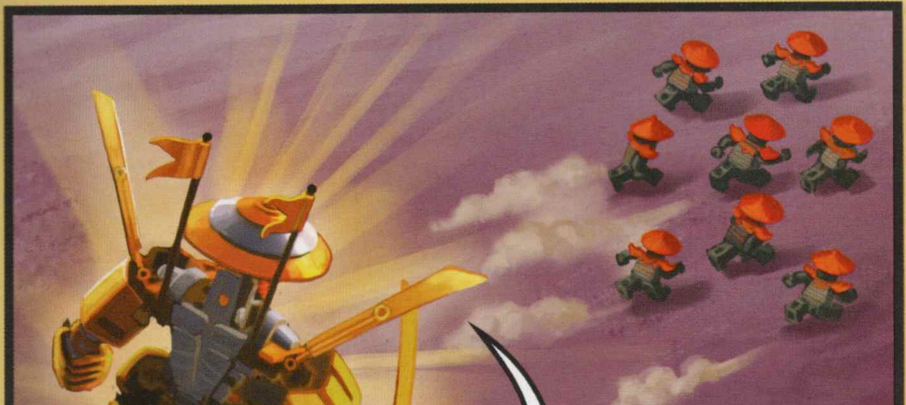
THE GOLDEN MECH USED BY LLOYD TO FIGHT THE OVERLORD'S STONE ARMY SUFFERED DURING THE LAST CLASH.
YOU LOOK BAD, AND YOU'VE LOST YOUR SHINE. I'M GONNA FIX YOU RIGHT UP!
A MONTH LATER
ARMS WORK. LEGS ARE FINE TOO. A BIT OF POLISHING, AND YOU'LL BE GOOD AS NEW!
A WEEK LATER
LLOYD! WANNA PLAY A NEW VIDEO GAME?
I CAN'T. I HAVE TO POLISH THE MECH.
ANOTHER WEEK LATER
LLOYD! WANNA GO TO THE MOVIES?
SORRY, GUYS! I HAVE TO POLISH THE MECH.
A FEW DAYS LATER
LLOYD! WE GOTTA GO FIGHT THE STONE WARRIORS!
GIVE ME A SEC! I NEED TO FINISH POLISHING THE MECH!
WHAT A WASTE! THE MECH IS GONNA GET DUSTY NOW ANYWAY.
AND THE STONE ARMY WILL SEE ITS GLOW FROM MILES AWAY!



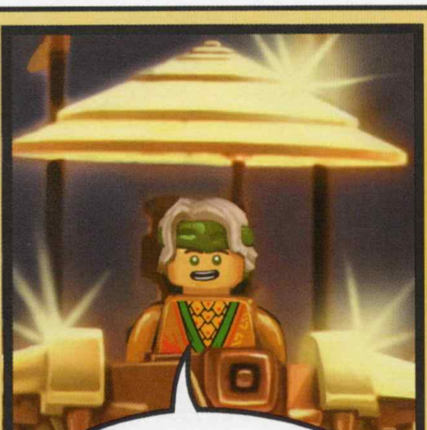
AS I WAS SAYING . . .



OUCH! MY EYES!*
WHAT A GLOW!*
I'M OUTTA HERE! I'M ALLERGIC TO GOLD!*
I'M GOING HOME TO GET MY SHADES!*
*A LOOSE TRANSLATION OF THE STONE WARRIORS' GROWLS.



I HAVE NO IDEA WHAT THEY WERE SCREAMING, BUT . . .



. . . I CAN'T HELP FEELING THAT POLISHING THE MECH WAS A GOOD THING.

THE GOLDEN STAR OF THE PARTY

BY MARTA LEŚNIAK

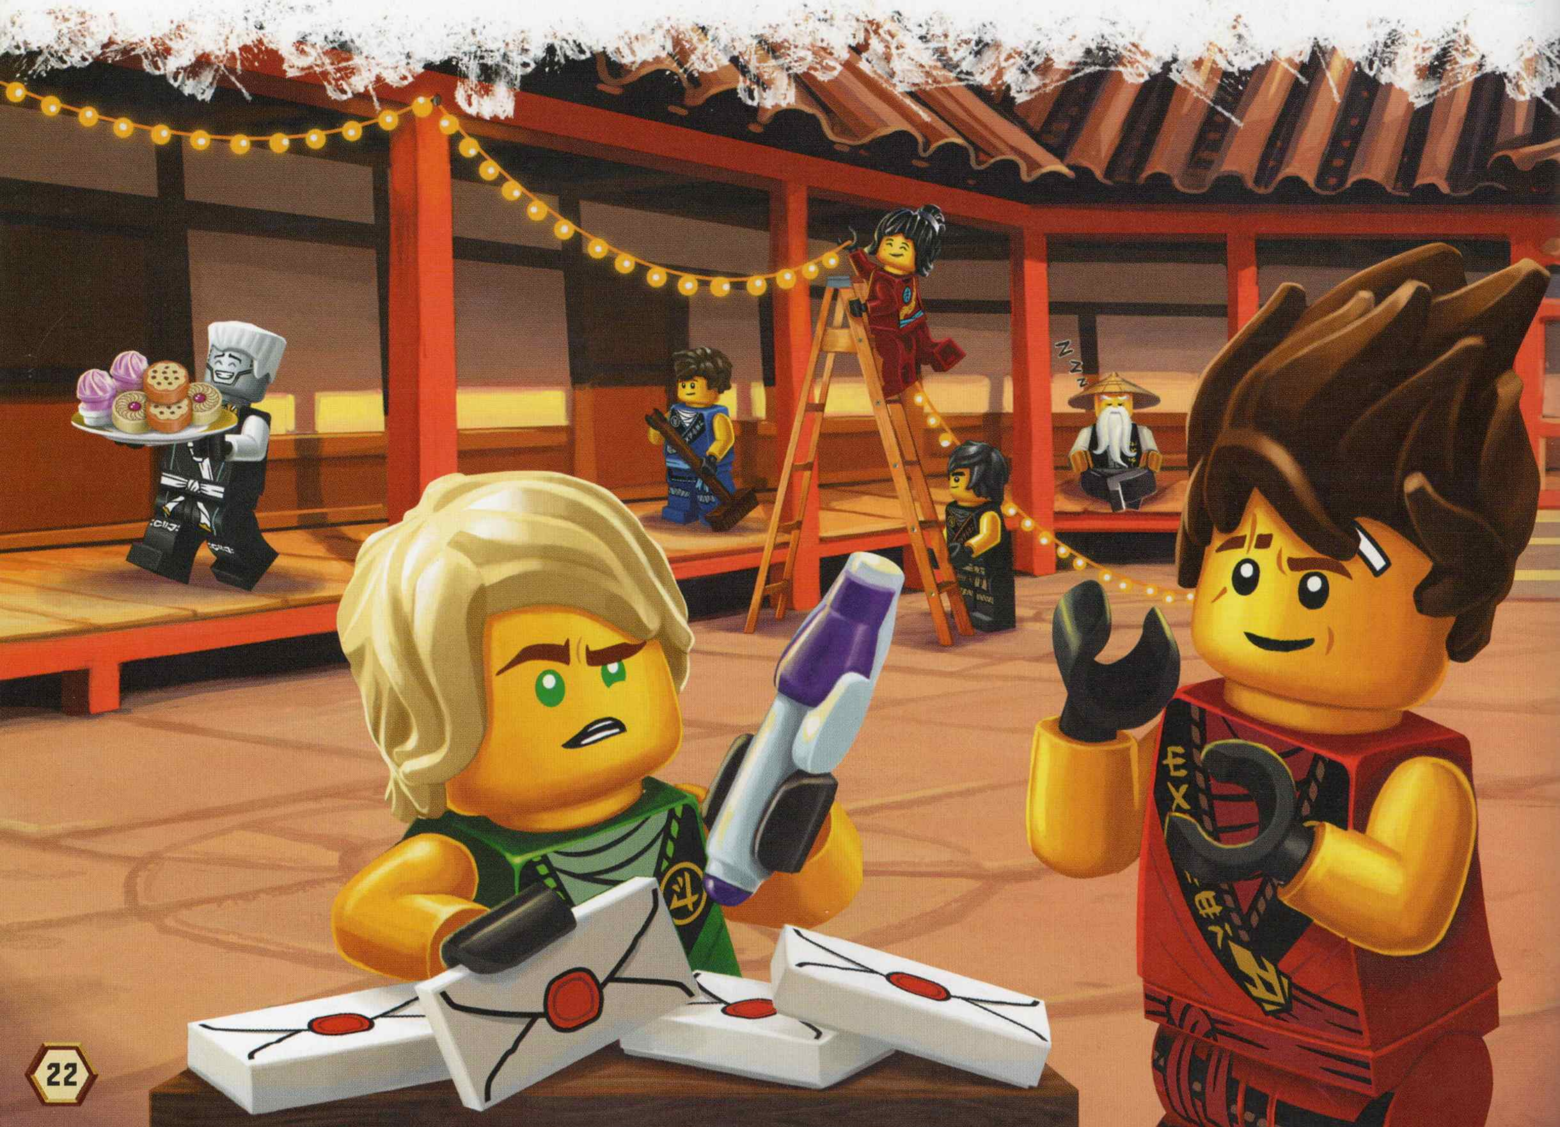
Inside the Monastery of Spinjitzu, the ninja convened at the request of Master Wu.

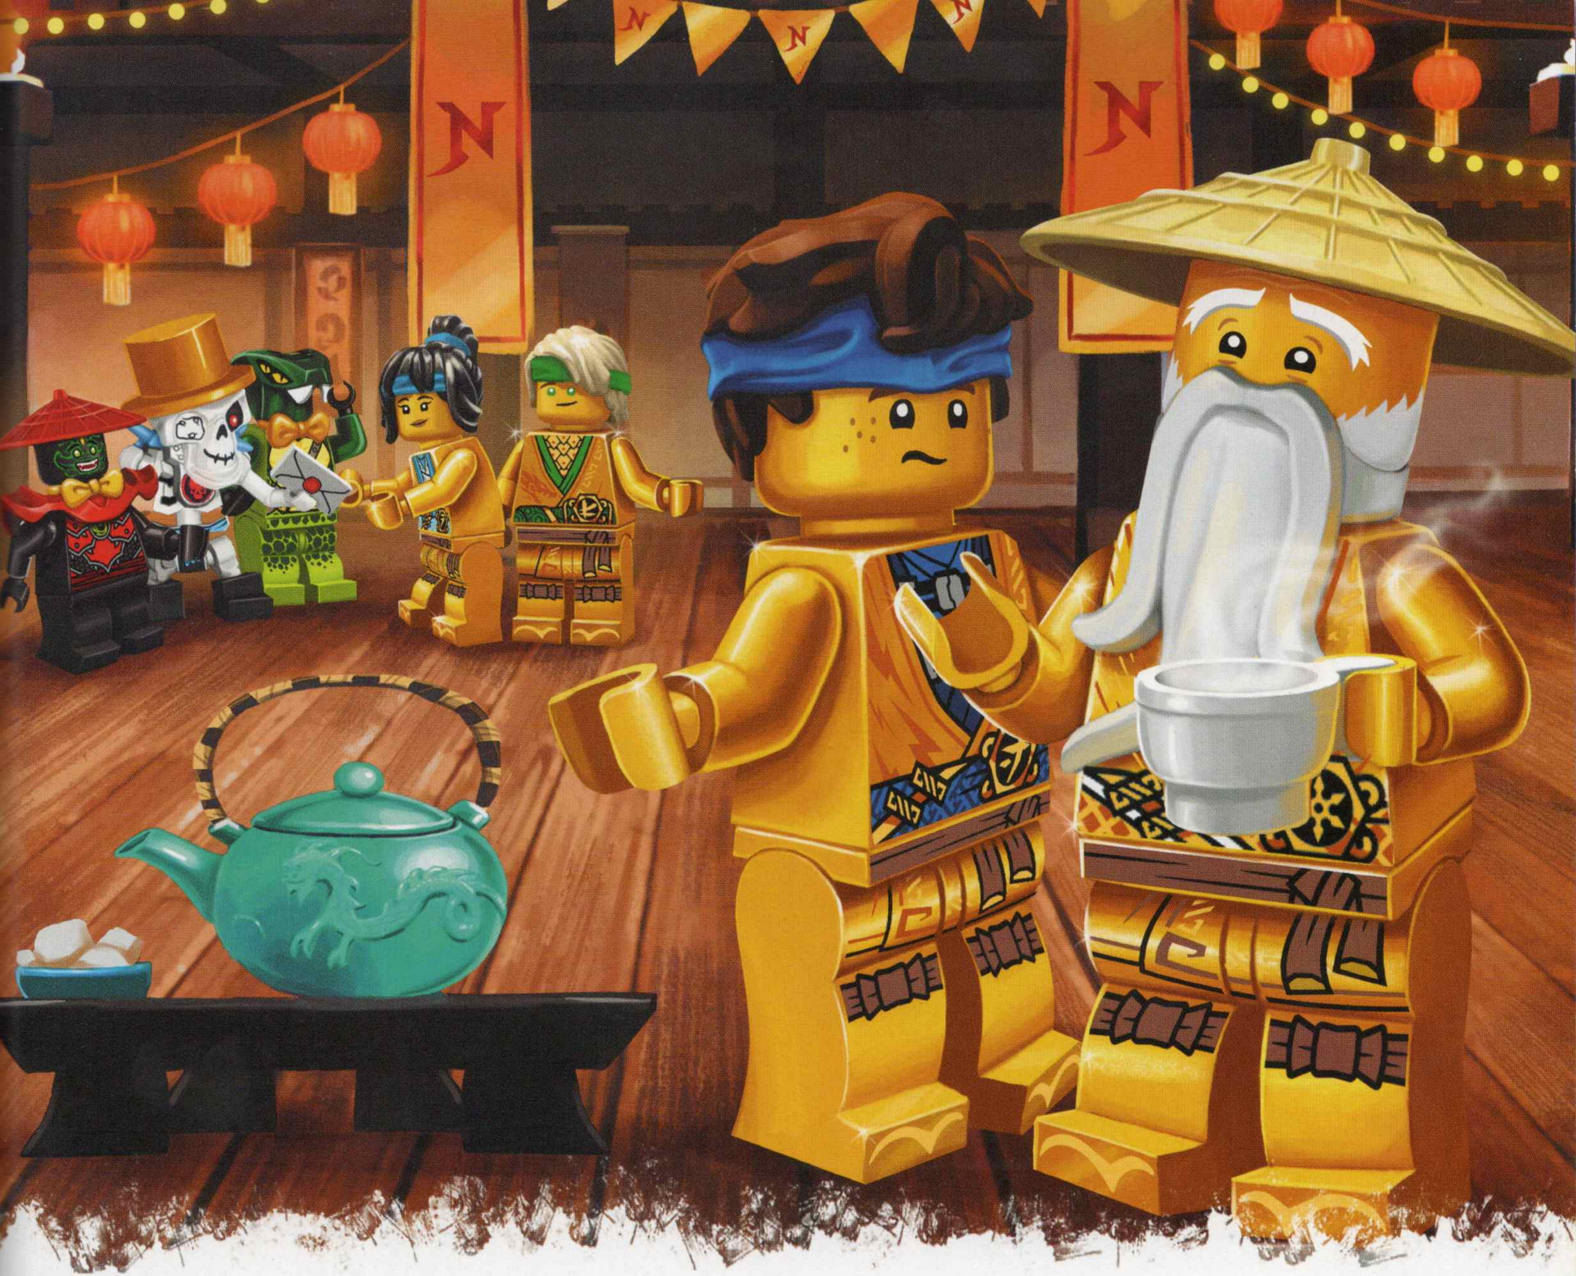
"Ten years have passed since you began standing guard over the land of Ninjago," Master Wu said. "Let us mark this important occasion with a . . . party."

The ninja leaped from their seats, "Great idea!" . . . "Hooray, a party!" . . . "But no clowns! Clowns are dangerous," they called out to one another.

"Remember," Master Wu warned, "only self-control and hard work can protect the planning committee . . . from hiring a clown."

Once the ninja chose a menu and a theme—the color gold—discussing the guest list was all that remained.





"I think we should invite the evildoers we've been fighting for the past ten years, too," Nya said. "After all, without our enemies, our anniversary wouldn't exist."

"Skeletons, Serpentine, Stone Warriors," counted out Cole. "They can come. But an invitation to the leaders of those bands is a bad idea."

"Yes. I calculate the risk is too high," Zane agreed.

The day of the anniversary party arrived. Master Wu and his students, all in funky gold costumes, greeted their guests.

"I wasn't expecting to have stage fright," sighed Master Wu, who had prepared a tea-making demonstration for the evening.

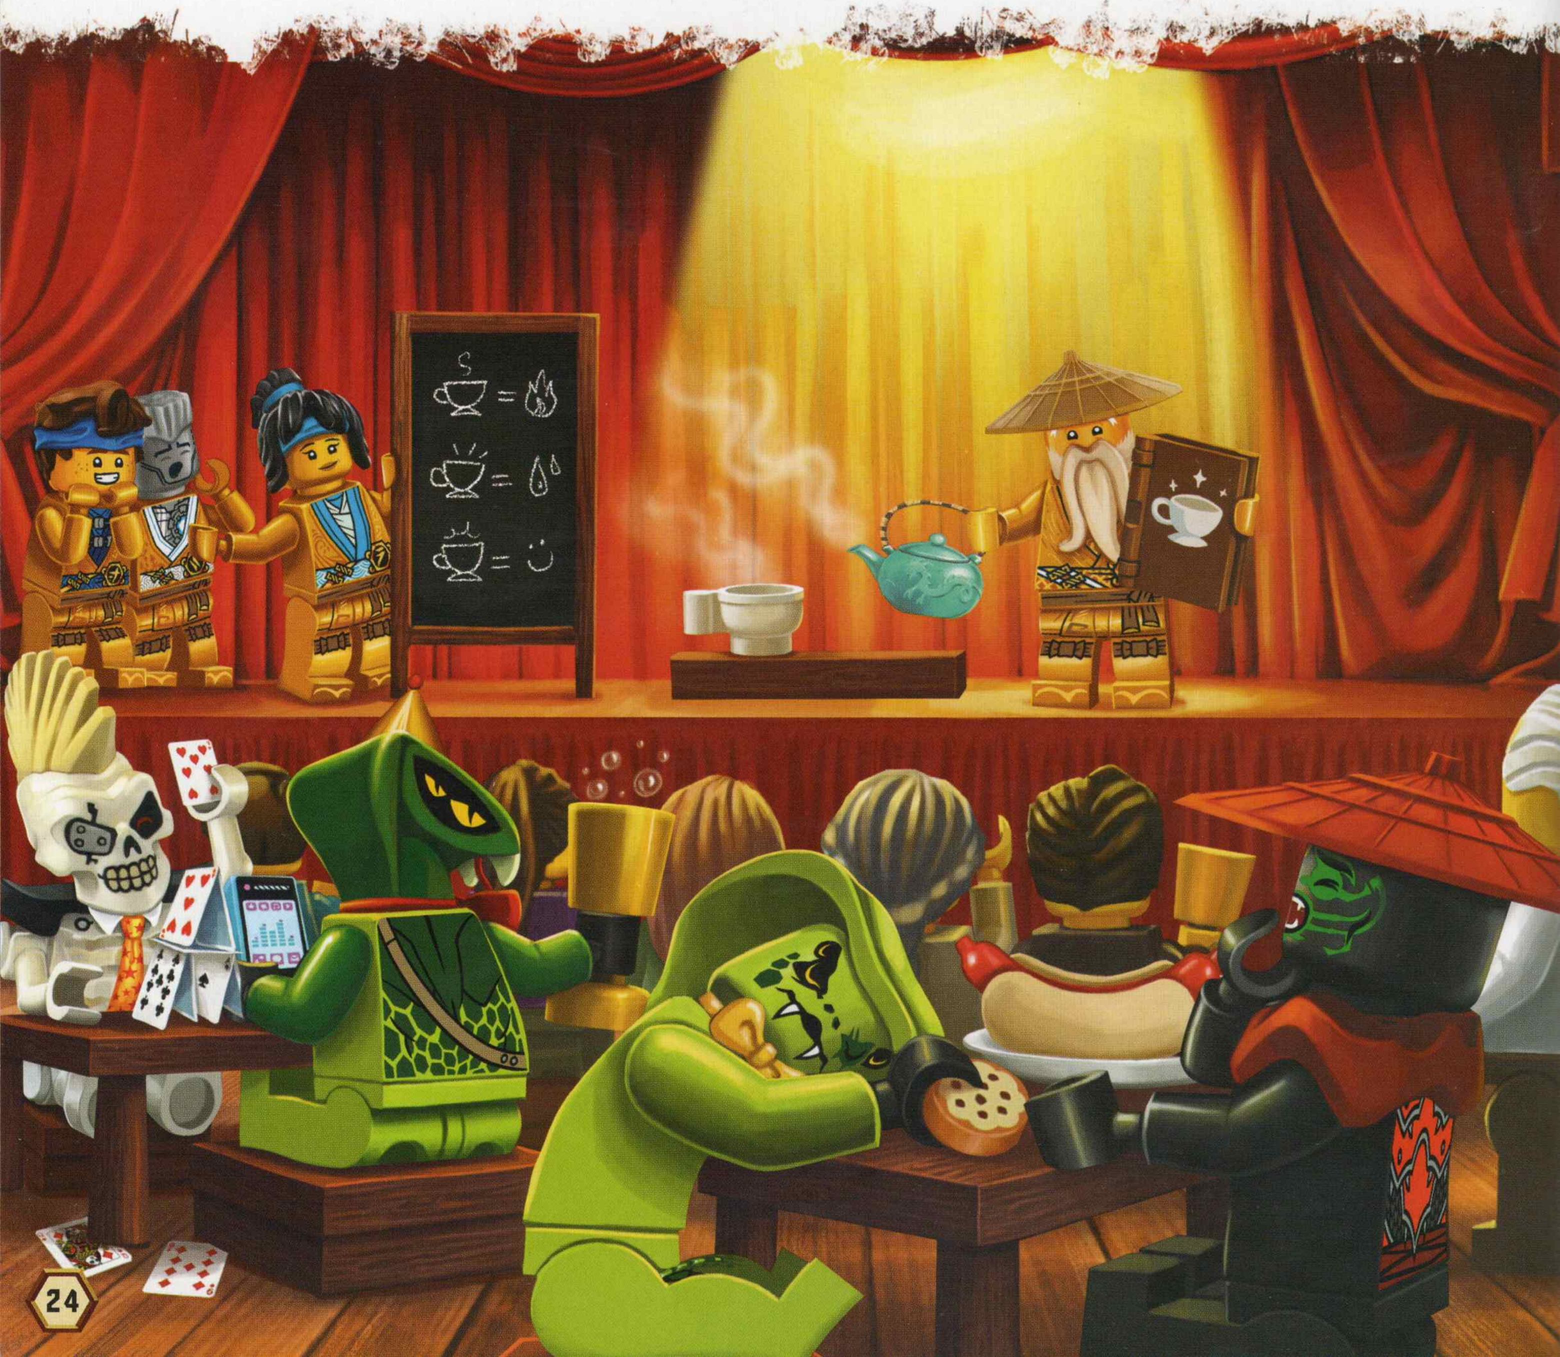
"I feel you, Master," admitted Jay, nervous about his stand-up routine.

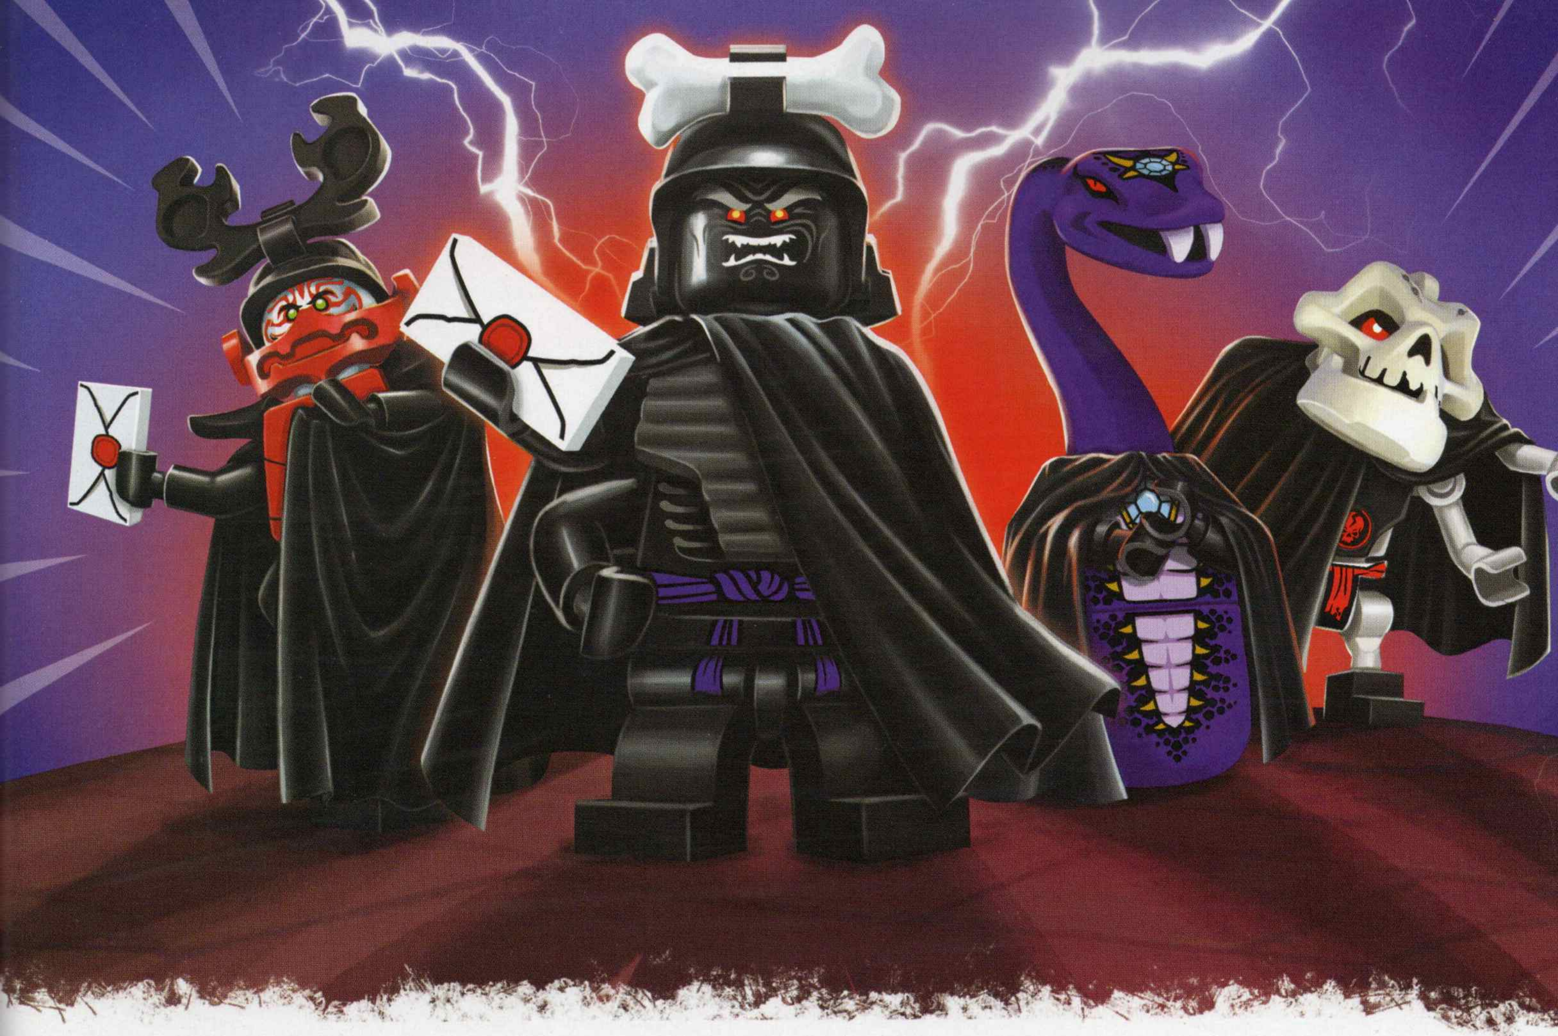
Soon all the tables were filled with families, friends, and enemies of the ninja. Forgetting past disputes, everyone was swept away by the party atmosphere. "You look great!" . . . "How long's it been?!" . . . "A toast to the ninja!" could be heard.

After dinner, Jay started his show. The blue ninja quickly forgot about stage fright as the audience burst into laughter after each joke. The stiff Stone Warriors even swayed to the rhythm of the hit songs Cole sang.

Master Wu's performance was next.

"First, I will show you my teacup collection. I've described each of them in this catalogue," announced the Master, opening a very thick book.





"YAAAAAAAAWWWNNN!" A bored guest lost interest during page two of the catalogue. A few guests even drifted to sleep. They did not sleep long, however, because they were awoken by loud thunder! Someone shouted, "Supervillains!" and on the horizon Garmadon, Pythor, Samukai, and General Kozu appeared.

The party patrons were terrified. The Serpentines hissed nervously, the Skeletons got goose bumps—despite not having any skin—and the Stone Army turned as pale as limestone.

"Get ready for a riot," moaned Lloyd as the ninja formed a line, ready to defend their guests.

"Is it nice having a secret party?!" Garmadon boomed. "Good thing I found the invitation for those bony blockheads," he added, pointing at the frightened Skeletons. "I asked all around, and you know what I discovered? Not a single one of my buddies got an invitation. So I decided to correct the oversight and invited us myself."

Garmadon reached under his cloak. The rest of the villains did the same. The crowd froze, and the ninja took on even stronger fighting poses. But instead of terrible weapons, in the hands of the evil ones appeared . . . golden hats, wigs, and silly glasses.

Dressed in gold party gear, Garmadon stood on the dance floor and decreed, "Ninja, we will fight you another time. We have come here tonight only as LORDS OF THE DANCE FLOOR! Hit the music!"

The guests, just a little nervous at first, couldn't resist the party vibe. The ninja soon joined in as well.

"Garmadon saved the party," Cole said, sneaking into the conga line that was snaking around the dance floor. "Thanks to him, no one has to watch Master Wu's show!"
